Digital Literacy at Communitas Montreal, Quebec, Canada

Communitas Montreal, a St-Henri based organization that promotes restorative justice, has been offering social reintegration spaces for formerly/currently incarcerated people since the 1990s. This digital literacy workshop will provide participants with the basic skills required for navigating the labour market, along with discussion-based sessions where we will talk about how the internet influences our civic and social lives.

I'm looking forward to learning more about the realities of the criminal justice system this year, and specifically how public policy shapes the lived experience of marginalized Canadians.

I've volunteered in different capacities for Communitas since the summer of 2020. Since March 2021, I've had the pleasure of getting to know the community even more through an oral history project that we are organizing to celebrate their 20 years.
